

International Council of Ophthalmology

Benefits of Membership in the ICO (and How to Apply)

Membership in the International Council of Ophthalmology (ICO) offers societies the opportunity to:

- Speak for your country or subspecialty in the “parliament” of international ophthalmology, the ICO General Assembly, with the right to vote and propose new initiatives
- Participate in defining the future of international ophthalmology and in improving and enhancing our profession
- Help preserve and strengthen ophthalmology as a single specialty, rather than as many fragmented societies with different agendas
- Give ophthalmology a stronger voice to those who influence and set health priorities and policy related to eye care around the world, including WHO
- Provide input into ICO programs, including the scientific program of the World Ophthalmology Congress and ICO International Clinical Guidelines
- Provide input into ICO policies and guidelines, such as curricula for training of ophthalmologists, medical students and allied eye care personnel and the Research Agenda for Global Blindness Prevention
- Provide guidance for improving ophthalmology residency training, subspecialty training and continuing professional development of ophthalmologists
- Meet, communicate and share experiences with the leaders of ophthalmological societies and eye care organizations from around the world
- Keep informed of news and developments in international ophthalmology beyond your specific area of interest

International Council of Ophthalmology

Jean Jacques DeLaey, MD, Secretary General

Department of Ophthalmology, Ghent Univ. Hospital, de Pintelaan 185, B-9000 Ghent, Belgium

Fax: (+32-9) 332-4963 E-mail: info@icoph.org Web: www.icoph.org

- Increase the recognition of your Society, its Congresses and programs
- Participate in and support other efforts to enhance ophthalmic education and preserve and restore vision for the people of the world.

What is expected of ICO Members

- Provide input into ICO policies, programs and initiatives
- Name an official Representative (preferably an officer who will have some continuity) to participate the ICO General Assembly at the World Ophthalmology Congress every two years
- Name an Advocate to work with the ICO on advocacy issues.
- Pay dues of 3 Swiss Francs (less than $US 2.50) per member per year.

How to apply for membership in the ICO

Submit an application (see <http://www.icoph.org/apply>) to:

Jean Jacques DeLaey, MD, Secretary General
International Council of Ophthalmology
Department of Ophthalmology
Ghent University Hospital
de Pintelaan 185
B-9000 Ghent, Belgium

Fax: (+32-9) 332-4963

E-mail: jean.delaey@ugent.be